HER TERRIBLE DREAM.

Her face is drawn, her eyes are haggard and sunken, and her expression is that of a woman on the verge of nervous prostration.

"What in the world is wrong?"
asks the astonished friend. "I never saw anyone look so terribly."

"It is all because of an awful nightmare I had last night," explains the sufferer. "It simply shattered my nerves, and, although I know it was merely a dream, still I cannot rid myself of its effects; I dreamed I was called upon unexpectedly to plan a dinner for Dr. Wiley, Dr.
Woods Hutchinson and Upton Sinclair."—Life.

NOT A VIVISECTIONIST.

Ned—My father's a doctor, and
yours is only a butcher.

Ted—Well, my father don't cut
'em up till they're dead, anyway.—
Judge.

AN "O. HENRY" TRAIT.

"O. Henry's" tolerance of another's shortcomings was one of his most human qualities. A college student who posed for a time as author of "O. Henry's" work wrote to him expressing his remorse, says the New York Post. The impostor said that he had begun it as a joke and finally was unable to extricate himself. The reply was as follows: "Of course, I know it was only a prank. Come down to New York some time and we'll do the town together. It was generous of you to stand for some of that stuff."

AGAIN POSTPONED.

Shem, having been rebuffed several times, had become decidedly impatient.

"Father," he said, "why under the sun can't we leave the ark now? The water has subsided!"

"Wet grounds," laconically answered Noah.

MISLEADING.

The youthful writer strolled in casually.

"I have just finished my new story," he remarked. So we queried:

"What is it called?"

"At the Throat of the World!" he replied. Haggard with horror, we leaped to our feet.

"At the Throat of the World?" we gasped. "What is it? A tale of bloody murder?"

"Not at all," explained the youthful writer, "it's merely the autobiography of a barber."

HE MAKES A HIT.

"Are you walking around the world on a big bet?"

"No, ma'am."

"Survivor of the San Francisco disaster, no doubt?"

"No, ma'am; I'm just a plain tramp."

"Come in and I'll cook you a real meal."

FIRE!

What is more alarming than the fire alarm, or more distressing than the scenes which frequently follow. Then what is

More Comforting

than to know that the home is
